GENT'S NIGHT OUT

Dapper looks, tasty pairings and historical fun in D.C.

THE MUSTIQUE CHARITABLE FOUNDATION HELD A NAUTICAL-themed night on Tuesday. The almost-private island operates on a unique system—each resident acts as a “shareholder” of the Mustique Company led by managing director Roger Pritchard, who co-hosted the evening with director, Nancy Young. Tommy and Dee Hilfiger are board members, as well as Basil Charles, proprietor of the island’s best watering hole, Basil’s Bar.

Later, Jaeger-LeCoultre and the Film Society of Lincoln Center held a dinner at Bar Bouldin in honor of filmmaker Alice Rohrwacher. The talented Italian spent her summer in Manhattan finishing the script for her next film, while rubbing elbows with fellow cinema heavyweights including cinematographer Ed Lachman, producer Ed Pressman and publicist Peggy Siegal, all in attendance.

Wednesday was spent in upstate New York’s American Oak Forests at Cedar Lakes Estate, courtesy of the Macallan. The opulent affair marked the release of the brand’s new “Double Cask.” Sixty guests including DJ Brendan Fallis and ambassador Kieron Elliott arrived via helicopter in the morning to enjoy a day of aged spirits and food pairings prepared by head chef and co-owner of the estate, Lisa Karvellas.

Salvatore Ferragamo paired the fine whisky with even finer footwear the same evening with the launch of the “Trazezza” made-to-order shoe program. A shindig unfolded at GQ’s members-only clubhouse, The Gent, hosted by hockey superstar and fashion obsessive, Henrik Lundqvist. Looking dapper in a plaid suit from the fashion house, he sat alongside male supermodel Sean O’Pry and actor Ethan Peck, son of the legendary Gregory Peck.

Thursday included a monumental dinner held in Washington, D.C., where Dom Pérignon congratulated architect David Adjaye and his team on the completion of the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History & Culture. The dinner, orchestrated by Chef Kwame Onwuachi and paired with rare Dom Pérignon vintage champagnes, was held on the museum’s fifth-floor terrace with a stunning view of the Washington Monument. The evening concluded in the museum’s basement where you find donated spaces like the Bill and Melinda Gates Atrium and the Oprah Winfrey Theater, but these all pale in comparison to Adjaye’s Contemplative Court where a towering circular fountain becomes the centerpiece of a simple four-wall room covered in powerful quotes.

Meanwhile, back in New York, Iris Apfel was busy launching her latest collaboration with Happy Socks at the Gramercy Park Hotel’s rooftop. The style icon held court as a constantly growing crowd awaited the chance to meet her. When not posing for photos, she chose to powwow with best friend and jewelry designer Alexis Bittar and United Legwear CEO Isaac Ash.

Later, a fashionable crowd gathered at Brooklyn Bridge Park’s Pier 2 for a black-tie evening courtesy of the Brooklyn Bridge Park Conservancy. Brooklynites Keri Russell and Matthew Rhys, co-stars of The Americans and real life couple came out to support, as well as fashion world heavyweights Marcus Wainwright of Rag & Bone, Eletra Wiedemann, La Ligne’s Meredith Melling and former Met Gala mastermind Sylvana Ward Durrett, who took the evening off from her own party producing biz.

The busy week ended with a bang (or pop of Moët) at a champagne-fueled Cinema Society bash for Kristen Stewart’s new flick, Personal Shopper, at the Skylark. Michael Stipe, Josh Lucas and Cuba Gooding Jr. took in the stylish and spooky ghost story and quaffed bubbly until 2:30 a.m. ■
